

I am so gald to know that there are good wholesome people out there that are also concerned about the amount of violence, sex, and other disturbing displays on television. While it is true we can always change the channel or turn off the TV, why should any of this kind of violence be on display at all? There are enough horrific crimes occuring everday and reported on the news that we certainly don't need to be entertained by watching them. We should be filling the airwaves with wholesome entertainment that can be enjoyed by anyone and everyone, without having to be concerned about who it is going to effect, and how, unless it is in a positive manner. Not only do we need to get rid of the violence and sex that is shown on TV, but also any that is talked about. If I, as an adult, am disturbed by the things that I see or hear, even by the commercials for certain shows, I shudder to think of the kinds of ideas or images TV can put into the minds of our little children. Parents do need to be responsible for their own children, but the truth is there are too many that aren't; and, parents can't be with their children every second of everyday. If it is possible to reduce the amount of violent crimes that occur in the world, (by even just one percent) because we change what is viewed on television, we must do it, and do it now! Everyone wishes for the world to be a better place at some time or another, so lets make it that, for us, for our children.
